I just wanted to let you know how much we genuinely appreciate your help over the past several years. Your ability to help us solve simple and complex plating problems has enabled us to maintain the level of quality required by our customers and has given us approximately 75% of the muzzleloader projectile market share. You're thorough knowledge and experience of the processes enable you to explain complex plating concepts in a way that just about anyone can understand, thereby allowing us to make use of this information with the utmost confidence. Your willingness to take the necessary time required to solve and/or explain plating problems shows that you are truly concerned about our ability to maintain a quality product. And now recently you have provided us with the necessary procedures, equipment requirements and training to allow us to do our own in house solution analysis. We can now have chemical status results in hours, instead of several days (not to mention the costs associated with outside analysis), giving us much greater control over our plating process. I would highly recommend your services to anyone involved in electroplating and wish you the best in your endeavors.
